considerable interest is to the effect that a bill has been drawn by the national administration for transmission to the various state legislatures making later to proceed or vote contrary to the specifications of the platform upon which he was elected

We do not like to think of a law of this nature unless there is assurance that the statute of limitations preclude proceedings against former offenses.

We recall that the Democratic plat form of 1912 contained this paragraph "We favor a single presidential term and to that end urge the adoption n amendment to the constitution mak ing the president of the United States ineligible for re-election, and we pledge the candidate of this convention to this

Another interesting clause in the same platform was in there words We favor the exemption from tell of al American ships engaged in coastwise trade passing through the canal," ir the same platform appeared a spiendid tribute to the American people for their neutrality which gave rise to the injunction that "we should be neutral thought as well as in act," and the platform concludes with a commendation of President Wilson, "who has preserved the vital interests of our government and its citizens and kept us out of war." Another expression of the platform of 1916 more recently absorbing the public attention says: "We recommend the extension of the franchise to the nen of the country by the states upon the same terms as to men."

time and disposition to study political advance whatever territory Armoni the president for keeping us out of not compose itself till this point war, and the equally fine tribute to established. the president by the next enevention at San Francisco in 1920 for winning

There may be times when a platform expression should be carried out as a sacred obligation. There are other times when a platform should not be considered seriously, but interpreted according to what was written in good faith and what was inserted as a votecatching phrase to make party success

We believe the trans of the times is away from the disposition to commit a president, member of congress, course of procedure as by a written of the brave about as effectively as governor or even a legislator to a given centract for his term of office

Now there be five different varieties | meant absolutely nothing to his young

The first among these social calamities is the man who talks about himself.

It is the puffy gentleman, always among those present, who has a 60-inch chest expansion and a 50- hatband. And he is the happiest, cheeriest thing on earth, for he is always lost in joyous contemplation of that marvel of perfection—himself. And he is bathed in a glow of self-righteousness, for he feels that he is doing a noble and altruste thing in teiling you to admire him.

The man who talks about himself has only one topic—himself. But that is inextanustible. He will spend hours discoursing to you just why he eals oatmeal for breakfast and takes his steak medium done, and when he begins on the thrilling serial of what he saint to the boss and what the boss said to him it is a continuous performance which nothing save some untoward accident. The man who talks about himself sees the village cutup's idea of a joke and it is to escape this pest of provincial communities that many people move to large cities. They fail from move to large cities.

the boss and what the boss said to him. It is a continuous performance which nothing save some untoward accident can stop.

The man who talks about himself sees all life in terms of his own egs. The most important thing that happened in the great war was his buying of a Liberty bond. Talk about the mosterplees of literature, and he hands out of his pecketbook and reads to you a letter signed by Vox Populi that be wrote to some newspaper. Speak of great artists and he tells you that he painted the house whits with green trimitings. He has been trimitings for the some frightful catastrophe that has wrecked cities and slain thousands, and he breaks in with an account of the time he sprained his big toe.

Prudent people five at his approach and he attributes it to envy and jealousy of him, and that he man murders him is the signal triumph of civilization over our natural impulses, for any jury would acquit the slayer on the ground of justifiable homicide, committed in self-defense.

Q.—What is the meaning of the old saying, "Beware of the Greeks when they offer you gifts?"—C. L. S.
A.—The original. "I fear the Greeks bearing gifts," appears in Virgil's Aenold. The reference is to the slege of Troy. The Greeks besieged the city of Troy without success. Finally they resorted to strategy, offering a huge wooden horse to the Trojans as a gift. The horse was taken into the city and while the Trojans slapt, the warriors, with which the horse was filled, came forth and opened the gates for their Greek comrades. The conclusion is that one should fear an enemy when he seems friendly.
